Why is there so much dissent in America today? The esential problem to me seems to be late awakening of the people. - particularly the young ones - for this generation has been both awake and asleep at the same time and those who are awaking up now seem to want to make up for lost time by being rowdy, boisterous, making a last minute effort to share great accomplishments.

What these rowdy, vociferous, unkampt, smelly, Jesus like citizens are doing is nothing more than a show of there inability to accept the changes which have taken place in America. They have assumed the garbs of Indians and Pilgrins, In an effort to erase the wrongs which occurred in their maturity.

America pier prior to her maturity.

This is a new cultura lucky for it to have people awakening rather than speeping on lawels of the past. Lucky for it to have two hundred years later aclash kexween of thought at a time when her deeds have proven that failures are incentives to further experiments. Lucky for it to have vociferous bearded or clean -shaven beachers, clerks, barmen, taxi drivers and janitors who vote and grant the rowring crowd there chance to roar. Lucky too that the voice that has no vote can be heard in its cry of protest.

I remember the day I gave my seat to a pregnat black woman on a bus somewhere between Gainsville, Florida and New Orleans, Lousiania. I had the last seat on the white section. An empty one lay ahead so I moved forward letting the pregnat woman seat down. Two minutes later the bus came to a halt, the driver went up to the woman made her stand up went back to his seat, the journay continued. I set bewilderd. I looked at her at the two empty seats at my fellow travellers. No one screamed. Somehow I felt I had screamed loud enough. So, I remained in my seat.

when I think the baby in that woman's belly could be one of the noisy youth of today I am inclaiding to say "More power to you "but, when I hear the word POWER so missused I join hands with the group which looks not for power but for a revival of American ideals in which all athnical, religious and political groups can work together because each group has accepted its mistakes understood each others short comings and pledge to make this republic, to the worldist stands: "One nation, under God, indivisible and with liberty Wjustice for all."
